

admin - Thu, 2/13/2014 - 12:21

A zero coupon bond is a bond that makes no periodic interest payments, but is instead sold at a deep discount from its face value. Although the owner of the bond receives no interest payments, he or she is taxed on the imputed income of the bond each year. The bond's imputed income is determined by its implied interest rate, based on its discounted price, years to maturity, and face value.

Print

Categories

Definitions - General Gift Planning